

Tierra Brindisa

Sibling to Borough Market's Tapas Brindisa, this cosy restaurant is decked out in calming olive green, with a bustling open kitchen at the back. The tapas menu gives deserving space to favourites from the Borough mother ship, such as large juicy prawns cooked with garlic & chilli, & creamy Iberico ham croquetas packed with flavour. But more ambitious newcomers aren't as consistently good: while pork cheeks with butter beans delivered tender meat in a rich sauce, quail escabeche with dried fruits failed to dazzle. Nonetheless, ingredients are impeccably sourced & even simple aperitvos such as Padron peppers are a cut above what you'll find in most tapas joints. The reasonably priced, all-Spanish wine list comes with short, helpful tasting notes, but be warned: service can get distracted during peak times.

Reader Ratings

Overall

8.3

Food and Drink

8.6

Service

7.9

Atmosphere

7.3

Value for Money

7.6